oneworld Airlines to Offer Most Nonstops Between Tokyo (Haneda) and the United States

New York, N.Y...February 10th, 2011... – American Airlines, a founding member of the oneworld[®] Alliance will operate daily, year-round, nonstop service between New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport (JFK) and Tokyo International Airport at Haneda (HND), two of the world's principal financial centers.

"We are thrilled about American Airlines direct flight to Haneda from JFK," said Bill Sarcona, Assistant General Manager, Kintetsu's New York office. "The closeness of Haneda to central Tokyo will make it all the more accessible for Americans visiting this fascinating city. We look forward to offering all our corporate and leisure clients this exciting new flying option when traveling to Japan." Both companies, along with alliance partner Japan Airlines (JAL) celebrated this new service with a special kick-off celebration at Kintetsu's New York office.

The new service also will complement the two daily flights that American's oneworld partner, Japan Airlines (JAL), plans to operate between Tokyo (Haneda) and the U.S., which would give oneworld the most daily nonstop U.S.-Haneda flights of any aviation alliance.

The new service will strengthen our relationship with our oneworld partner, Japan Airlines, which has extensive operations at Haneda, and benefit our respective customers as oneworld will offer more daily frequencies between the U.S. and Haneda than any other alliance," said Craig Kreeger, American's Senior Vice President – International.
